For Immediate Consideration by Immigration, Refugees and Citizenship Canada

BRIEFING & RECOMMENDATION – COVID-19 impact to Canada's higher education sector; in applications by international students to Canadian institutions for September 2020 and January 2021 intakes; projected impacts and associated policy recommendations

ApplyBoard, a Canadian technology firm serving the international education sector

May 21, 2020

Thank you to Minister Mendicino and Immigration, Refugees and Citizenship Canada (IRCC) for leadership shown throughout the COVID-19 pandemic, and for continuing to hear concerns raised by ApplyBoard and other stakeholders regarding impacts to the higher education sector in Canada.

The enclosed recommendation follows past policy recommendations and echoes many of the previous recommendations as challenges to the sector persist.

SUMMARY OF CURRENT STATUS:

- International students need their studies to be PGWPP-eligible, or else they will not start/continue their program.
as programs became PGWP-ineligible based on initial IRCC policy which deducted out-of-country virtual learning.
- Following the May 14 IRCC policy change, in order for fall 2020 virtual learning from home countries to be PGWPP-eligible, students require a study permit
- IELTS (testing centres closed)
- Medical tests (doctors closed)
- Biometrics/fingerprinting (VACs closed)
- Academic Credentials (institutions closed)

s.20(1)(a)

s.20(1)(b)

s.20(1)(c)

- In the globally competitive environment for international students, many of whom become skilled immigrants, other countries have publicly committed to opening their borders to international students (e.g. Australia, UK, New Zealand; top destinations for international students.)

PROBLEM 1:

² They can therefore not begin a PGWPP-eligible program, so will not apply/enroll in fall 2020 programs.

IMPACT: Canada's higher ed sector will face until the

PGWPP-eligibility issue is resolved.

as days and weeks pass without resolution and action is required.

so quick

OPTIONAL SOLUTIONS:

OPTION 1 (OPTIMAL): IRCC waive requirement to have a study permit to start fall 2020 programs virtually from abroad and retain PGWPP eligibility if study permit is later obtained. Also release forward-facing guidance that students can anticipate further similar announcements enabling students to begin PGWPP-eligible programs in future terms without a study permit (e.g. winter 2021) if student mobility challenges persist.

OPTION 2 (IF OPTION 1 IS NOT POSSIBLE): IRCC encourage online permit application and, for the time being, waive requirements for: IELTS, Medical Tests, Biometrics and Academic Credentials, along with providing forward-facing guidance on future expectations if student mobility challenges persist.

OPTION 3 (IF NEITHER OPTION 1 OR 2 ARE POSSIBLE): IRCC must somehow guarantee that students will be able to get a study permit by the time their program begins (e.g. September, October, January).

s.20(1)(a)

s.20(1)(b)

s.20(1)(c)

PROBLEM 2: 50% in-class requirement for programs to be PGWPP-eligible prevents students from starting or continuing 8- and 12- month programs in fall 2020.

IMPACT: 50% in-class requirement for programs to be PGWPP-eligible has two impacts:

1. Students who started an 8- or 12-month program in summer 2020 will defer continuation of the program until it can be taken in class, otherwise it will not be PGWPP-eligible. Also, given that students may put their study permit in jeopardy by taking an unscheduled 'break' in studies, without further guidance by Friday, May 29 may cause these students to abandon their studies altogether prior to the summer add/drop deadline (May 30-June 1 for most schools).
2. Students embarking on a fall-start 8- or 12-month program due to uncertainty around winter 2021 program delivery and PGWPP eligibility.

These two impacts will result in

OPTIONAL SOLUTIONS:

OPTION 1 (OPTIMAL): Waive 50% in-class requirement for programs to be PGWPP eligible for all programs starting in summer and fall 2020.

OPTION 2 (IF OPTION 1 IS NOT POSSIBLE): Flex the 50% requirement from a per-program basis to a combined requirement across all programs taken (the student's entire "body of work"). That is, if a student takes a 1-year program starting in 2020 that ends up delivered 100% virtually, and follows it with a 1-year program in 2021 that is 100% in-class, the student's entire body of work would satisfy the 50% requirement, thus fulfilling the underlying purpose of the PGWPP program.

India is currently on full lockdown until at least the end of May. High school exam results will not be available until the end of July and IELTS exam testing centres are not open, so applications for study permits cannot even begin until August. Without some flexibility on the requirement for study permits, intake of Indian students to Canadian higher education institutions in fall 2020 will plummet. Similar headwinds are currently experienced in a number of other major source countries for international students.

May 27, 2020

Issue: Applyboard submitted a proposal to the Department to minimize the impact of COVID-19 restrictions on Canada's education sector by seeking further flexibility in the Post-Graduation Work Permit Program eligibility requirements. Two specific questions were posed in order to ensure that international students will begin their studies in Fall 2020. They are seeking guidance from the Department by May 29, 2020 so that designated learning institutions can decide whether to cancel fall programs, make human resource and other financial decisions.

\f0Hello Pemi, Andre, Malcolm, David and Charlene,

\f0

\f0I hope this email finds you and your families doing well, and settling into the new work from home reality.

\f0

\f0I wanted to take a moment to send my appreciation for the recent policy change impacting international students, and any part that you may have played in the change:

\f0

If your in-class courses are being moved to an online-only format because of COVID-19, your eligibility for the Post-Graduation Work Permit (PGWP) Program won't be affected. This includes students who have a study permit or who have been approved for a study permit for a program starting in May or June but who are unable to travel to Canada at this time due to travel restrictions. International students in this situation may begin their classes while outside Canada and may complete up to 50% of their program while outside Canada if they cannot travel to Canada sooner.

\f0

This will no doubt have a significant impact on students, schools, and employment across the higher education sector. Now ApplyBoard can get to work to recapture a high percentage of students who were planning to begin studies but were leaning away from doing so given travel restrictions currently in place. This is the solution that we needed!

\f0

\f0It's a great opportunity for the sector, so thank you!

\f0

\f0Hope to speak again soon.

For Immediate Consideration by Immigration, Refugees and Citizenship Canada

BRIEFING & RECOMMENDATION – COVID-19 impact to Canada's higher education sector; in applications by international students to Canadian institutions for September 2020 and January 2021 intakes; projected impacts and associated policy recommendations

Sr. Director, Innovation and Strategy

ApplyBoard, a Canadian technology firm serving the international education sector

April 23, 2020

APPRECIATION:

Thank you to Immigration, Refugees and Citizenship Canada (IRCC) for its leadership during the COVID-19 pandemic, and contributions made through expedited policy and process change achieved during such an unstable time. We truly appreciate the response to requests by ApplyBoard, Universities Canada and their members, Colleges and Institutes Canada and their members, CBIE as well as other sector stakeholders. The recent policy change regarding post graduate work permit (PGWP) eligibility enabling May and June intake students to begin programs from their home country without impact to the benefits of studying in Canada is exactly what the sector needed to address immediate implications of student mobility restrictions. Subsequent policy changes have also had a tremendous positive impact.

RECOMMENDATION:

While the policy changes were excellent, the time they took to implement was unfortunate, as many institutions had already been forced to cancel some or all summer 2020 programs.

We now need to consider the impact of current policy on the September 2020 AND January 2021 international student intake streams, and how quickly change needs to occur.

These are unprecedented times. International education is _____ with over _____ _____. This sector is one of the hardest hit by the restrictions placed on global mobility, and immediate and drastic action is required, "leaving no stone unturned" as the Prime Minister has continuously promised.

There will no doubt be an echo effect on employment in fall 2020 through winter 2021, at a time when it is hoped that the economy will begin to recover. The reduction in international student applications we see now will impact the number of enrolled students in Fall and Winter terms, and without aggressive policy change, enrolment and employment results may not normalize until Fall 2021.

We recommend that IRCC immediately enact policy that will encourage international students to continue to apply to study at Canadian higher education institutions with confidence that current global circumstances will not impact the benefits of a Canadian education. Recommendations include:

- 1) Extend assurances now that eligibility for the Post-Graduation Work Permit Program will not be affected for students beginning programs in Fall 2020 and Winter 2021 if the restriction on global mobility persists, enabling them to begin their classes while outside Canada. This includes easing the requirement that 50% of the program be taken from within Canada, as this is critically sensitive for students embarking on a 1-year program. We recommend guidance that there will be no minimum percentage requirement for 1-year programs (or less) in the case that travel to Canada will not be possible by Jan 2021 when the second half of programs begin.

- 2) In this time of reduced applications, commit to expedited study permit application processing to give additional confidence to the smaller pool of applicants interested in studying in Canada.
- 3) Until the end of February 2021 (to cover Fall and Winter intake periods), enable international students to begin online studies without a study permit, and give them the option to include proof of completed courses in their future study permit application to give them a stronger application.

BACKGROUND:

Given the current climate, it is vital for the Canadian higher education sector and a supportive government to become increasingly bold with their programming and support of international students to ensure success and future growth of this important Canadian export.

ApplyBoard has

This will help build confidence in a Canadian education, but the value proposition has changed, and government support is needed to adapt policy to the current climate.

The education sector has long been proven to be counter-cyclical. The difference with the COVID-19 economic downturn is that the combination of restrictions on global travel and the requirements of the PGWP program have changed the overall value proposition of a Canadian post-secondary education. The original value proposition needs to be maintained and given that travel restrictions may persist for the foreseeable future, the only way to maintain it is through policy change.

With hundreds of thousands of jobs across the country tied to international education (Statistics Canada has reported that for every 3.1 international students in Canada, 1 job is created), we must move very quickly to find a way to keep this important export sector functioning and employing at full capacity.

This impending employment issue is of immediate concern. There is no future target date that will fix the problem as the reduction in applications has happened already and continues to happen every day. However, a quick change in policy could help improve the situation going forward.

Allow international students to begin programs without a study permit:

The purpose of this recommendation is to alleviate current pressure on two components of the study permit application process: 1) IRCC's capacity to accept and evaluate applications given closed embassies and online-only application, and 2) Reduced global capacity to gather required biometric information and English language proficiency results.

One of the many considerations in IRCC's evaluation of study permit applications is the comfort level with the applicant's study plan.

This approach could also drive higher academic achievement by international students, as the study permit approval would be

Timeline of the Student Journey to Canada

To help with an understanding of why there is such a below is an approximate outline of when different parts of the student journey to Canada take place:

Given how early in the journey that decisions are made, there will be a long-term impact on the sector unless Canada increases comfort now for applying students and their families. We are faced with an erosion of confidence in global study abroad opportunities, and it is our belief that the first countries to get this right will have a significant advantage in the post COVID-19 global competition for international students. The time to act is now!

Hi

Confirming this has gone to Ops. Adjusted the issue re: timing you caught and added a 'bottom' line to bring out the choice you flag –

Thanks.

David – was Ops consulted on the first question? We should really push these questions to them from now on.

On the second one, I don't get the math here.

I guess the question is ultimately –

Good grief. It seems DMO wants to advance this a bit sooner – they would like us to provide our bullets/responses to those two Word document questions for this upcoming Wednesday Policy Bilat.

Josh also flagged

Could you please advise if you think we could be ready for the upcoming bilat on the 27th instead of June 3rd? Thx
